Here to Keep You Safe

LINKEDin

Let's get linked-in, The Vol State OTIEC office is entering a new social media campaign. The goal is simple, to expand the Vol State OTIEC safety net in region four. OSHA training works to protect both employers and employees. Whether it's saving lives on the jobsite, or avoiding fines with proper reporting, knowledge is safety. With that in mind, the Vol State OSHA Training Institute Education Center family hopes you will get LinkedIn and join us on a journey to better safety.

NEW LEADERSHIP FAMILAR FACE

It's time to turn the spotlight on the woman behind the Vol State OTIEC. Kristen Woodmore became the Ed. Center's Director in July of this year.

She is a graduate of Trevecca Nazarene University, with a bachelor's in Management and Leadership, as well as a 2003 VSCC alumni. If you've experienced Vol State OSHA, you know Kris, and better yet, she knows you. The new director has a 15-year history with Vol State, joining the college in 2007. When the Ed. Center initially formed in 2012, Kris assumed the role of Outreach Coordinator. Ten years later, the name Kris Woodmore, and her reputation for excellence, is synonymous with Vol State OSHA.

Directors Meeting

Director Kris Woodmore, and Administrator of OSHA Training Curriculum Joseph Small, traveled to the OSHA Training Institute in Arlington Heights Illinois, for the first in person directors meeting since 2019. The meeting focused on best practices, and strategies to meet OSHA's goals of training America's workers. Joe is pictured wearing a fun and futuristic augmented reality training tool the HoloLens.
